

A retrospective look at graphic artist Roman Cieslewicz

20 July 2010 Last updated at 14:07

Roman Cieslewicz was one of the most influential graphic design artists of the 20th century.

Living on the very cusp of the computer age he was happier with scissors and glue than new technology.

But he was a master of poster art and now a major retrospective exhibition of his work is being staged at the Royal College of Art in London.

David Hannah reports.
